With the Reddit story algorithm, the number of votes and the submission time of a link have the largest effect on where a story will rank. This is because Reddit implements a logarithm function in its algorithm. With this type of algorithm, the first votes on a link are more valuable than later votes on a link.

The APY is based on how much Algo is committed to governance. More algo = less APY. The foundation estimated this number to be somewhere in between this range closer to 15%. This estimation was done before Algo saw this recent price pump and increased volume. I don't know what this number will be, but I expect it to be on the lower end.
